

NEW YORK POST

BEFORE YOU SHOP...

November 12, 2006 -- AS millions of Americans prepare to begin their holiday shopping spree, not-so-well-known Web sites are popping up offering discounts on everything from fishnet stockings to fishing poles.

The trick is knowing they exist and remembering to check in with several of the sites. If you do, you'll probably never have to pay full price again.

One of the many online coupon sites, Fabu.com, is offering a 10 percent discount on whatever you buy online at Target. Clicking first through Fabu before picking up a $3,300 61" Panasonic TV would save you $330.

An added advantage of these sites is that there is no clipping and no printing out of coupons - the savings are automatic.

Not too shabby.

Folks familiar with coupons sites suggest becoming familiar with a half dozen or so because each may offer exclusives not found at other locations.

It will take just minutes to bookmark these coupon sites, but it can save you hundreds of dollars.
